NEW DELHI, INDIA, April 24 (AP)—Mechanized Japanese vanguards have reached the Taunggyi area within 100 miles of vital Mandalay, a trust of nearly eighty miles outward from the region of fallen Lushan, a Chinese commune disclosed tonight.

This force was located at the town of Hopong, ten miles east of Taunggyi, in confirmation of a previous announcement from British headquarters that the Chinese were engaged in violent combat with the invaders in that region.

The Chinese announcement stated that forty enemy aircraft had been continuously bombing the Chinese positions, which are at the left of the Allied Burma line, and that there were heavy casualties on both sides in continuing fighting.

Casualties Heavy

On the Taunggyi front far to the southwest of this action, Chungking's communiqué reported the Japanese had suffered 3,000 casualties in a week's fighting between the Sui river and the town of Pyinawana and that in four days about 3,000 invaders had been killed or wounded against Chinese losses of 1,000 killed or wounded.

Fighting on that front was said to be centered about Tatkon, which is thirty miles north of Pyinawana.

The earlier British communiqué of the invader's thrust far into Loi-kaw had thus briefly summarized the action:

Chinese front: Fighting attacks are developing in the east front of Shenyang and Taunggyi. Reports of both actions were heavier but matters appear to be developing satisfactorily.

These Chinese troops are under command of the American Lieutenant General Joseph W. Stilwell.

British Consolidating Line

On the allied right, held by Chinese and British, no action of consequence was reported and at the center the British forces which previously had made a slight withdrawal to a point just above the town of Taunggyi apparently are consolidating their positions.

The enemy was throwing up defensive positions below Yenangyung, in the middle of the ruined oil fields.

The British command announced that Mandalay and vicinity had again been bombed, but that there were no particulars of casualties or damage.

The Chinese foreign office spokesman in Chungking issued a statement urging stronger offensive action against Japan, "who can easily

Crowd Estimated at 1,800
Places Complaint before
Gov. O'Connor

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 24 (AP)—An estimated 1,800 negroes, protesting what their spokesman said was "a wave of police brutality" in Baltimore, laid their case directly before Governor O'Connor at the State House today.

The negroes made the pilgrimage to the capitol by train, bus and auto and some claimed they walked the twenty-five miles from Baltimore. Filling both legislative chambers of the capitol, the negroes heard their leaders ask O'Connor for increased representation in the Baltimore city police department and other state organizations.

They told the governor they feared a "serious racial conflict may result" unless the alleged police brutality ceased.

Protest Treatment
Spokesmen for the Citizens' Committee for Justice, which sponsored today's "march on Annapolis," declared the pilgrimage was "born of desperation and inspired by the plight of the colored population of Baltimore."

Despite the bitterness of the attacks on the Baltimore police department and its commissioner Robert Stanton, the throng, which overflowed the House of Delegates chamber, preserved order throughout the two-hour rally.

President Believed To Be

Sends Message to Churchill
Approving Plans of
Chief of Staff

LONDON, April 24 (AP)—The issue of an allied invasion of Europe was sharpened today by Lord Beaverbrook's militant demand for a second front and by the suggestive information that President Roosevelt had notified Prime Minister Churchill he agreed with all conclusions reached by Gen. George C. Marshall, United States chief of staff who recently visited Britain.

Mr. Roosevelt was said to have sent a message to that effect to Churchill today.

(The nature of Gen. Marshall's conclusion was not disclosed, but in Britain he said "the time for action is near," and that Americans "inevitably soon will join the Commandos.")

Lord Beaverbrook's New York speech last night emphasized the British public's concern over what the government will do with the largest army ever assembled in this country.

Huge Army in Service

An army of between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 equipped with tanks and mechanized weapons, is cooperating with the largest air force in Europe and is a formidable fighting machine, according to its own commanders and visiting American officers.

Its employment in a great European campaign this summer is an urgent necessity, according to a section of the public clamoring for action now.

Lord Beaverbrook, famous publisher and Lease-Lend coordinator, is the powerful advocate of this group.

British sources said his address could not be regarded as coming from the British war cabinet, but many nevertheless held it was a

208,000 Expected

Fourth Registration Will Be Conducted in State
April 25, 26 and 27

Approximately 208,000 male residents in Maryland will be registered April 25, 26 and 27 for classification according to their skills and aptitudes for war production work, Col. Henry C. Standwood, state director of Selective Service announced today.

National Selective Service Headquarters in Washington, D. C., anticipates a total registration of about 13,000,000 men between the ages of forty-five and sixty-four years, inclusive, in Continental United States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and Puerto Rico.

The registration will include every male citizen and every male alien resident, other than persons exempted by the Selective Training and Service Act, who had attained the forty-fifth anniversary of his birth on or before February 16, 1942, and has not attained the sixty-fifth anniversary of his birth on or before April 27, 1942.

These men who register on April 25, 26 and 27, the director pointed out, are not liable for military service under the law, they will be given certificates of registration which they must have in their personal possession at all times and produce at the request of authorized persons. Later they will be required to fill out an occupational questionnaire detailing their civilian qualifications and skills, but that will be for the purpose of obtaining information only.

Gas Consumption

Drastic Cut To Take Place
Two Weeks before
Cards Are Issued

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—Gasoline consumption in the east probably will be cut to fifty per cent of normal on May 1, meaning that non-essential vehicles may have to get along with an average of around six gallons a week, a government source indicated today.

It was understood that deliveries to filling stations would be cut to one-half normal because of a worsening of transportation problems. They already have been cut one-third.

Since vehicles necessary to health and safety, commerce, government, schools and other essential purposes would continue to receive all the gas they needed, supplies available for non-essential automobiles might be only forty per cent of pre-war demand, one official pointed out.

Area Not Certain
There was no definite indication whether the more severe limitation would apply also in the Pacific northwest.

Such further curtailment for the east would be effective until May 15 when a card rationing program will be instituted.

An allowance of an average of about six gallons a week to non-essential users would approximate the twenty-five-gallons-a-month that an aide to Ickes said probably would be allotted such motorists at the start of card rationing.

The limitations in the first half of May and during the first weeks of card rationing probably will be

Red Internment

President Not Worried about Landing of Aviators in Russia

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—High officials indicated today that the United States government had no disposition to object to the reported Russian internment of an American plane and its crew which landed in Siberia after bombing Japanese cities.

When reporters called President Roosevelt's attention at a press conference to Moscow dispatches concerning the incident, the chief executive replied with light banter. However, he did supply the tangible information that he had received an official communication from Moscow relating to internment of a plane.

Presumably, this communication was from the Soviet government, for Secretary of State Hull told a later press conference that nothing had been received as yet from Ambassador William H. Standley.

Law Being Obeyed

The State department head went on to say that he was not in a position to discuss the international legal aspects in the absence of a report from the ambassador. But, he said, news dispatches from Russia indicated that the matter was being dealt with according to international law and precedent.

Russia and Japan have a non-aggression pact, Hull commented, adding that it might be on the basis of this pact that the Soviet action was taken.

Limited as these comments were, the plain intimation appeared to be that officials here were quite

President's Ideas Revealed in Testimony of Sec.
Jones

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—A proposal by President Roosevelt to locate telegraph offices in post office buildings throughout the country was submitted to a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee today by Secretary of Commerce Jones.

Testifying in support of legislation to authorize consolidation of telegraph companies into single domestic and single international systems, Jones said the president had requested him to ask for a provision in the bill authorizing post offices to rent space, where available, for telegraph offices.

Jones told the committee that the president believed there were hundreds if not thousands of places in the United States where such an arrangement could provide economy for the government as well as the telegraph service and would mean a convenience for the public.

Speaks for President

Saying that he was authorized to quote the president as favoring the principles of the merger legislation, Jones added that "naturally the president would want proper protection in the bill for displaced labor."

The commerce secretary declared that need for speedy enactment of the legislation was urgent and that otherwise the Postal Telegraph Company "obviously cannot survive without a government subsidy."

The secretary asserted that there could be "no reasonable objection" to the merger on grounds of monopoly.

"The telegraph business," he said, "is as much a natural monopoly as the telephone business, or, you might say, the post office. Rates are fixed by a governmental authority

Axis Submarine

Protects Lifeboats of Panamanian Tanker after Sinking Ships

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—The commander of an Axis submarine, after sending two torpedoes into a Panamanian tanker without warning, turned sympathetic and acted to protect the survivors in their two lifeboats, members of the crew said in an interview authorized today by the third naval district headquarters.

Only one of the crew of thirty-nine died from the attack, which occurred off Trinidad March 13. The quartermaster at the wheel was burned by flaming oil and died later on a rescue ship which picked up the survivors after twenty-two days in the open lifeboats.

The master and officers of the ship were from Nazi-occupied countries and asked that their names be withheld. There were no United States citizens in the crew.

The master said that after the men left the ship in the lifeboats the submarine's commander maneuvered his craft so as to make a lee for them and protect them from swamping by the seas of burning oil. The commander also offered medical supplies and other assistance to the men, the master said.

A third torpedo struck the tanker after the crew had launched the lifeboats, the skipper added, but the ship had caught fire immediately after the first two struck. There was no time for an SOS, he said.

Massed Planes Drop
"Greatest Weight of Bombs" in Important Positions

LONDON, April 24 (AP)—The largest force of RAF fighters ever sent against a single objective escorted bombers attacking The Netherlands port of Flushing by daylight today, following up a pre-dawn assault on the Heinkel aircraft factories and the German Baltic port of Rostock in which the air ministry said massed bombers loosed the "greatest weight of bombs" in the service's history.

Nine fighters were lost in the Flushing raid and in sweeps over northern France, while five Nazi planes were destroyed. One of these was a Junkers 52 troop transport, shot down in flames by two American Eagle pilot officers.

Number of Planes Secret
In saying the fighter group was the largest ever employed, the air ministry declined to disclose the actual number.

It said the hour-long raid on Rostock and the Heinkel works, which cost four planes, started gigantic fires visible for more than 80 miles at sea.

The "very heavy" explosive bombs set the town and harbor ablaze in an attack officially described as "effective as that on Luebeck."

The tremendous attack of March 28 on Luebeck, 60 miles southwest of Rostock, was a landmark in the campaign to sap the power of the German offensive preparations in the east and north by wrecking industrial areas. British authorities say forty percent of Luebeck's main area was destroyed, on the basis of photographic evidence.

In striking just as heavily at the Heinkel works near Rostock, the British bombers dropped down to 3,500 feet and did not release a bomb until the center of the factory area was in the bomb sight.

The ministry said there were indications the plant was gutted.

British Lose Nine Fighters

Fighters followed up the night attack in daylight today, the air ministry announced that nine British fighters attacked Flushing on the destroyed in attacks over northern France and on the docks at Flushing, The Netherlands.

Four German planes this morning and two this afternoon attacked points in southeast England.

Daylight sweeps of fighters followed up the night attack in daylight today with a renewal of the forays against northern France, despite a stiff northeasterly gale, and bombers strongly protected by fighters attacked Flushing on the Dutch coast. But it was the Rostock attack which dominated the RAF's operations of the past twenty-four hours.

Preliminary reports of last night's raid on Rostock said there were widespread fires and heavy damage—at the cost of only four RAF

Big Forest Fires Out of Control
In Southern Maryland's Woodlands

LAUREL, Md., April 24 (AP)—High temperatures and low humidity—ideal conditions for forest fires—prevailed again today and serious fires were reported to be raging out of control in southern Maryland woodlands.

Reports from Radio Dispatcher Douglas M. Parr at the district fire office indicated that the area of 2,000 acres laid waste by nearly thirty fires yesterday would be surpassed by fires today.

The worst fire conditions were reported to be concentrated in southern counties but woodlands are burning in other sections of the state with at least one fire near Towson in Baltimore, out of control.

Parr said a fire near Camp Springs in southern Prince George's county southwest of Washington had burned over a 750-acre yesterday and, out of control, laid waste an additional 750 acres today. Two companies from Washington were aiding the forest fire-fighters, he said.

An uncontrolled fire was burning in a Charles county forest and another in St. Mary's county, Parr added. Six new fires were reported this afternoon.

Fire fighting forces were taxed by the serious outbreak which began in earnest yesterday. Walter J. Quick, assistant state forester in charge of fire fighting, said. Conscientious objectors from the Palapco camp were helping fight the Baltimore county fire.

Quick said that even without the reports from southern Maryland, the lower Eastern Shore and Western Maryland, the fire loss yesterday was "pretty serious." One 225-acre fire burned just west of Newkirk in Prince George's county.

The naval academy's dairy reservation was hit by a 300-acre blaze and soldiers from Fort George G. Meade were drafted to fight the fire.

War Production Program May Be Increased Soon

Roosevelt Hints Change Because of Unusual Success

By RICHARD L. TURNER
WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt hinted today that the already gigantic goals of the war production program may be increased, so well is the program going.

The only lag on any consequence was in shipbuilding, he said, attributing it primarily to an overall shortage of steel shapes and plates rather than to any management or labor slowdown. Steps are being taken, he added, to increase the nation's steel production capacity.

The president's statements, made at a press conference, revealed, too, that he believed civilian consumption of steel was too great, and that the War Production Board held a contrary view. A survey on the question is in progress, he revealed.

An indication of the rate at which production is moving came meanwhile from Harold D. Smith, director of the budget, in figures which he submitted to the House Ways and Means committee for its guidance in formulating the new tax program.

Gives Spending Figures

Total spending figures for this fiscal year, (ending June 30) he said, will be $28,000,000,000, instead of $26,000,000,000 previously estimated. Next year's total, he added, has been revised upward from $56,000,000,000 to $70,000,000,000. Weekly outlays have jumped from $409,000,000 during the week of Pearl Harbor to $690,000,000 currently. Originally the nation's war production goals included 185,000 planes, 120,000 tanks, 55,000 anti-aircraft guns and 18,000,000 tons of commercial shipping by the end of 1943. Some called the figures "fantastic," and in Berlin it was said the program was impossible of accomplishment, intended primarily as a bluff.

Sights First Set High

When the schedules were announced in January, administration officials were admittedly "setting their sights high." The figures were based not on what the country would need to fight the war, but on what officials thought would be industry's maximum output.

It was obvious from the president's statement today that the administration, with an eye to the expansion of war production since Pearl Harbor, has concluded that however "fantastic" the figures might have seemed in January, America's capacity to produce the tools of war had actually been underrated.

The president's indication that the schedules may be correspondingly expanded came in reply to a press question on the country's steel producing capacity. He was asked whether he thought that plants now under construction or in process of enlargement would be sufficient to meet all wartime needs.

New Schedules Later

Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative and his reason, he said, was that by the time the new or enlarged plants were ready for operation there may be a new production program, new production schedules to be met.

A correspondent reminded him that Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, defense shipping administrator, told a Congressional committee that there was "too damned much loading" in the shipyards, by both management and labor.

That, the president said, was a good burr under the tail of both labor and management, but the more responsible factor, he thought, was the shortage of steel plates, resulting from the aggregate building programs of both the navy and the Maritime commission.

High Cost of Living Roosevelt's Term To Describe Inflation

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—The official designation for the thing that is bothering a lot of people today became the "high cost of living" rather than "inflation."

President Roosevelt has objected to the latter term on the ground that most people, including himself, don't know what it means. He said today that high cost of living was preferable.

In the last World War, the headlines had much to say about "H. C. L.," as it was then abbreviated.

Standley Awaits Orders What To Do About Landing of U. S. Plane Crew

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

KUZYSSHEV, April 24 (AP)—United States Ambassador William H. Standley asked Washington today for instructions as to procedure on the case of five United States airmen interned in Siberia after they had raided Japan. This indicated that the case has not been completely closed by the Soviet union's strict application of international law.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, reported the landing and internment early today in the following brief dispatch dated Wednesday:

Report Landing of Plane

"Khabarovsk, April 22—On April 18th on the territory of the Maritime province there landed an American warplane. As stated by the plane crew, the latter participated on the same day in a raid by the American air force on the Japanese islands, and, losing orientation, committed a forced landing on Soviet territory.

"According to common international regulations Soviet authorities interned the American plane and crew."

The location was not disclosed, but Khabarovsk is about 1,000 miles northwest of Tokyo and 400 miles north of Vladivostok.

Angus Ward, United States consul general at Vladivostok, was reported handling matters for the American fliers.

Official Washington declined comment. There has been no Washington announcement on any phase of the raids, on which the Japanese have issued a variety of reports, including suggestions the planes were launched from aircraft carriers and "escaped to China."

Under the Soviet-Japanese neutrality pact which was one year old April 13, Russia is a neutral in the Pacific struggle even though allied with the United States in the war against Germany.

Standley in Moscow

As a neutral, she must intern belligerents who enter her territory. Ambassador Standley was in Moscow yesterday, being received by Premier Stalin and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

The Tokyo radio, without mentioning the forced landing incident, said that Japanese papers Friday printed articles reviewing relations with Russia and expressing belief that harmony would prevail.

The papers were quoted as saying "there is no reason why Japan and Russia should quarrel," and that "Britain and the United States have little chance to pit Russia against Japan." They suggested also that the Soviet ambassador, Constantin Smetanin, who now is "on leave" in Russia, should return to his post in Tokyo.

"Thus the Japanese, ostensibly at least, had no quarrel with the Russian action apropos the American airmen."

Fleet of

bombers, German accounts, which have admitted severe damage at Luebeck, minimized the Rostock raid, but they did disclose that one of the attackers approached Berlin.

It is 530 miles by air to Rostock, fifty less than to Berlin.

Some 90,000 persons live in Rostock and, in addition to the extensive port facilities known to have been attacked last night, there are Heinkel aircraft factories at Marienehe and Warnemuende, near the city.

Rostock Key Base

Rostock itself, on the Warnow Estuary, is a key base for seaborne supply of Nazi armies in Norway, Finland and north Russia.

Canadians again were in the bombers which blasted Rostock. The weather was good and they told of the spectacle of flame which lit sky and sea as they roared homeward.

Flashes of our bombs were outlined for a few seconds in the flames," said Sgt. R. H. Heather of Toronto. "Then they were swallowed up in great fires."

Authorities said the Rostock was part of a new British bombing strategy of concentrating the bulk of aircraft in operation on one town; thus to wipe out at least for the time being one target from the list of objectives.

That is what happened at Luebeck and the British hope reconnaissance will show that it happened at Rostock, too.

New air ministry figures, released tonight, said that in addition to power stations, docks and factories, 2,000 homes and apartment houses were razed in Luebeck, a city of 150,000 and that photographs showed an area three-quarters of a mile long and from 200 to 600 yards wide was almost completely devastated in the center of the town.

Photographs taken two weeks after the attack disclosed some streets still choked with debris and impassible.

Gas Consumption

more severe than restrictions imposed later in the year, oil circles said, since transportation services now are engaged principally in building up the east's industrial fuel oil supplies.

Transport Serious Problem
It was made clear, however, that transport would continue to be a problem.

That every effort is being made to solve the east coast oil problem was emphasized at hearings during the day before a Senate agriculture subcommittee.

Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum co-ordinator, told the senators that "given six months or so, perhaps we can develop a substitute (for tankers) that will meet the east coast demand. That will require some steel for pipe lines."

War agencies controlling use of available steel tubes have rejected proposals from Ickes for a pipeline from southwest oil fields to the east, contending the steel was needed for ships and armaments.

Medicine Found In Haystacks Is New Life-Saver

Dicoumarin Used Successfully To Prevent Pneumonia

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

ST. PAUL, April 24 (AP)—Dicoumarin, a medicine literally discovered in American haystacks, in its first year of use is already saving lives of people threatened with blood clots and with the pneumonia which happens after surgical operations.

The pioneer work was reported to the American College of Physicians today by several physicians including Dr. Edgar V. Allen and Dr. Nelson W. Barker of the Mayo Clinic and the University of Minnesota.

Comes from Clover

Haystacks, unsuspected by scientists, have been manufacturing this dangerous but life-saving drug for countless centuries. It is a product of chemical changes occurring when sweet clover spoils during faulty curing. It makes blood so watery as to leak out of veins. When that happens the clover kills livestock.

It took nineteen years to learn all this, and a veterinarian first started the work, but the main credit goes to Prof. Karl Paul Link, Wisconsin agricultural experiment station. He found dicoumarin and a year ago chemists synthesized it in crystalline form for medical use.

Dicoumarin does nothing to clots after they have formed. But it seems able to prevent them under all circumstances. Clots in lungs are often fatal, and when a person has survived one, Dr. Allen said, others are likely. However, not a person given dicoumarin at the Mayo Clinic has yet developed a second clot.

Drug Prevents Clots

The drug is also useful to prevent clots in the calves of the leg, the main base where they are made and whence they move around the body to cause sudden death.

After surgery one of the unquenched risks has been postoperative pneumonia. In the cases reported dicoumarin is credited with completely preventing this pneumonia.

The dicoumarin to save a life is expected to be cheap, probably $1 to $1.50 a day being enough. Heparin, another new drug which also thins blood the same way, Dr. Allen said, costs ten times as much.

Dr. Irving S. Wright, New York city, told of dangers from dicoumarin. He said blood may escape from the veins so freely that it fills pouches of other kinds of tissue, and one of these pouches may get as big as a football.

content at this time for Russia to maintain its attitude of neutrality toward the Pacific struggle while concentrating on battling Hitler.

President Roosevelt, in his exchange with reporters, declined even to confirm that American warplanes had raided the Japanese islands.

No Confirmation of Raid

"The Russian announcement tends to confirm the Tokyo reports," a reporter remarked.

That, said the chief executive with a twinkle, was not put as a question and hence did not require an answer.

Then another reporter inquired whether the plane would become a Lend-Lease craft.

To this, Mr. Roosevelt said he had read only that it would be interned and that he assumed an interned ship was immobilized.

A hearty laugh was the only response to a question whether the plane might be interned on the front facing the Germans.

Asked if the names of the interned crew would be released here he said probably not.

It is equally natural that China, the United States and other Pacific nations regard the defeat of Japan as their most important role and a logical requirement of the entire strategy of the United Nations."

Baltimore Police

Vigorous protests against the fatal shooting in February of Private Thomas Broadbush, a Pittsburgh negro, by Officer Edward Bender were voiced as prominent Baltimore negroes asserted steps to provide equal rights with respect to law enforcement agencies were necessary.

The case against the Baltimore Police department was expressed by W. A. Houston, attorney, who said:

Ten Negroes Killed

"Since Commissioner Stanton took office, there have been ten killings of negro citizens by policemen on the streets of Baltimore city.

"These unfortunate homicides have been investigated by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and in no case could there be found full and adequate justification for the killings in the light of the law pertaining to self-defense or the apprehension of suspected criminals.

"Our people," he concluded, "are being taught that policemen do not move among them to protect them and to uphold the law and, to say the least, it is producing a damning psychology which in the end must lead to disaster."

"You have my assurance of co-operation," O'Connor told the crowd, "and I am expressly pleased with your intelligent presentation of the arguments."

"I am in favor of appointing a commission to make a study coupled with the appointment of another commission to act promptly on matters which the executive office can decide immediately."

Following the rally, O'Connor said he would endeavor to meet each problem individually after studying the protests again.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

It is conceivable that the unhindered arrival of an American bomber in Siberia, fresh from blasting Japanese targets, was doubly welcome to the Russians.

Ship and crew were promptly interned, according to Kuzysshev accounts. That was an exercise of the common law of war governing neutrals. It gave the Soviet union opportunity to demonstrate to Tokyo its present aloofness from the Pacific conflict although at the same time it is a leading member of the United Nations anti-axis fraternity.

Actually Are Guests

Those interned American bombardiers enjoy a unique status. They are at once nominally unwelcome visitors and honored allied guests in Russia. Had they come by the front, not the back door they would have been uproariously received. It is to be assumed that the restrictions of internment will rest very lightly upon them.

The incident, although it only adds to the mystery of the how and why of the bombing of Japanese cities and increases Japanese puzzlement, serves another purpose. It strongly underscores Lord Beaverbrook's revelation in New York of a British public "passion" for opening a "second front" against Germany.

One purpose of Beaverbrook's speech naturally was to contribute to Nazi jitter over the possibility of British or British-American invasion of western Europe. British commando raids which may have a marked effect on Nazi plans. Berlin cannot ignore this threat in disposing of available land and air forces.

Beaverbrook stated furthermore the most optimistic concept of war possibilities implicit in British-American grand strategy. He pointed out that it is in Russia, and nowhere else on a battle front that girdles the globe that a possibility exists of ending the war in a few months instead of years.

"Russia may settle the war for us in 1942," Beaverbrook said. "By holding the Germans in check, possibly even by defeating them, the Russians may be the means of bringing the whole Axis structure down."

"This is a chance, an opportunity to bring the war to an end here and now. But if the Russians are defeated and driven out of the war, never will such a chance come to us again."

That, in a nutshell, is the explanation of the otherwise unaccountable fact that neither Washington nor London seems at any time to have urged Russia to rupture her unnatural neutrality toward Japan. Even limited Russian intervention in the Pacific would go far to ease the threat to India and Australia

Siberian bases could afford opportunity for American air power to make the bombing of Tokyo and Japanese industrial centers a savage business, not the mere token affair it is as yet.

But war with Japan might critically detract from Russian effectiveness against Germany and her western Allies, and it is there that the only road to a possibly quick victory lies.

symptom of governmental change toward the idea of invading Europe this year.

Beaverbrook's catalogue of the British power for "directing such an attack against Germany" has had an admittedly "profound effect" on those who believed Britain lacked the munitions and equipment.

Advocates of Continental invasion realize the risks. Beaverbrook's own Evening Standard said today:

Will Mean Sacrifices

"It will not be easy. There will be difficulties and hazards and pitfalls. It will mean heavy sacrifices."

Developments in the past two months have noticeably diminished these risks in the minds of many Britons, however.

Success of the Commando raids at Bruneval, St. Nazaire and Boulogne in German-occupied France have demonstrated what can be accomplished by daring men with the right equipment.

The growing force of the RAP offensives also has demonstrated that Britain has enough planes to protect a large landing force within fighter-plane range.

Unrest in occupied countries and evident Nazi uneasiness about the political and military defenses in the west are facts "unquestionably favorable to attack in Europe," experts say.

Nazi Weakness Revealed

The recent Commando raids were declared to have shown weaknesses in German defense areas which were thought to have been formidable, particularly on the "invasion coast."

The Reuters news agency's diplomatic correspondent reported that after the raid this week on Boulogne, the German commander, Gen. Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt toured the scene, severely disciplining civil and military authorities.

The Reuters report added that the Germans claimed to have information that the Commandos received help from Frenchmen of the region, who prepared the way.

Three Americans Knew Tokyo Had Made War Plans

Correspondents, However, Could Not Send Messages from Tokyo

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—An American correspondent said today that Japan was so certain of its plans to strike at America's Pacific outposts that she had even prepared two concentration camps for United States citizens in Japan months before the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Recounting difficulties incurred in getting facts to America, Newman, correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune and one of the last newsmen to leave Far East before the outbreak of war, said:

Couldn't Cable Facts

"Max Hill, Joe Dynan, both of Associated Press, myself and others knew that war was near, but we couldn't get the real information out of Japan would have barred the members of the American press and we felt we could do more staying and getting what information we could."

Knew About Camps

"All the correspondents knew about the concentration camps. In fact, I believe one was established on Oshima island off Tokyo and the other was in the mission compound near St. Paul's University, which is subsidized by American Catholics."

Newman, whose book "Good-bye Japan" was published last year, explained how Max Hill, who interned by the Japs for the duration of the war, would have escaped except for a change of plans.

"My office gave me a month's leave of absence and I decided to spend it in Honolulu. Max wanted to join me and then decided to take time off later when he made plans to have his wife and 14-year-old daughter (then in United States) meet him in Hawaii."

A. P. Men Believed Held

In all probability, Newman said, Hill and Dynan are being held prisoners in their own apartment in the Nagai compound in the heart of Tokyo.

Hill, former chief of the New York Bureau, had been assigned to Tokyo more than a year before the Pearl Harbor attack. Newman joined the Associated Press staff there after Russell Brines transferred to Manila, where he was captured a few weeks ago by the Nipponese.

"I am a Druggist"

"To best serve the people of this community I maintain a stock of carefully selected merchandise. To be able to recommend the best product for every need, it is part of my training to know the definite standards of quality and measures that have been established by science and experience. When I order goods my selection is based on the known value of these widely recognized standards."

"Then I advertise to give people the news of my store. Because I know that nearly everybody reads a newspaper I use newspaper advertising regularly. When people pay for newspapers they read them carefully for all of the news that is interesting to them. When my ads are newsy and contain useful information I know that people will read them because they are news."

ANOTHER thing that merchants like about newspaper advertising is that they can buy it on the basis of known values that are just as definite as the measures of weight and quality that apply to merchandise which they handle.

Business men can not afford to speculate with advertising. When they buy newspaper space they can make their investments on the strength of circulation facts and figures that are verified. It is good business practice to buy advertising by such methods just as it is good business to select merchandise of known value.

This helpful information is available from reports issued by the Audit Bureau of Circulations, a cooperative organization of more than 2000 publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies.

This Bureau makes an annual audit of the circulation records of all publisher members. The verified reports based on these audits tell, for instance, how many copies of a newspaper are printed, just where they go and how distributed.

These and many other audited facts found in A. B. C. reports are the advertisers' assurance that they get what they pay for.

Children Should Learn To Enjoy Rural Beauties

Country School Teacher Can Help Youngsters Gain Knowledge

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

If I were a country school teacher, I should try to help interest in my pupils the many beauties around them and to make them want to carve their fortunes and careers right in the country.

I should make more intimate acquaintance with the plants and trees and birds and flowers of the country. When I was a country lad, and when I later taught in a district school, I felt little need to know the names of many of the growing things all around me. I took them for granted.

I could get along without a very close association with them. I did not feel a bread and butter need to cultivate this rural world. Of course, I knew about them; they were all around me. But I rarely had a personal social interest in them.

I doubtless was no more disinterested in natural beauty than most country boys and men were at that time or than most country people are today. I knew the crow, the robin, the sparrow, swallow, blackbird, and wren. But scores of birds were only birds to me. I knew the hickory, oak and pine and maple. I even helped to cut down chestnut trees and split them into rails. A few weeds and flowers I could call by name. But I found little need of knowing more. Most trees and plants and flowers were just trees and plants and flowers and nothing more.

The little that I know I did not get in school. There I learned the names of distant places, plants and trees and living, moving things which I had never hoped to see. None of us were the kind of barefoot boy that Whittier wrote about. The boy he described was a poet, and a naturalist. But like that boy, almost every country lad could be ought to be. The average country child often is a greater stranger to the big wide open book of nature than his city cousin is.

We do not really enjoy the association of those whose names we do not know. When we forget the name of a new acquaintance we are embarrassed and we are inclined to cease conversation with him. There seems to be a barrier between us.

Our first step in the enjoyment of another's company is ability to speak that person's name. The very name makes the relation personal; the absence of the name, impersonal. So with the birds and trees and flowers in relation to the country boys and girls. They cannot enjoy these gifts until they readily can speak their names as if they were persons.

If I were a country school teacher I should develop knowledge of the birds and flowers and plants all around. I should learn to enjoy their companionship.

If more children learned to enjoy the beauties of the country few of them would long to leave it for the city, where true beauty is so rare.

A graded list of books for the child 10 to 12 to read may be had by writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York city, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problems
Q. What do you think of hazing among youth of high school and college age?

A. I think it is a relic of savagery and should be outlawed. State legislatures should make it a serious offense to be punished severely. It is out of keeping with our democracy and certainly anything but patriotic in these times. Through hazing some fine youths are crushed for life or left crippled; some even lose their lives.

Q. Why is it that so many young children who are spanked or paddled for running into the street are not cured of this dangerous practice?

A. They are not punished consistently. They are punished now and then while they run into the street twenty times without getting punished. To be effective, punishment of the tot must be immediate and there must be no exceptions. Unless this principle is observed it usually is better not to punish at all.

Q. You advise having a tot sit in a chair doing nothing for about twenty minutes as punishment. My boy of five leaves the chair as soon as my back is turned.

A. He thinks it a game and he knows how to win. You probably keep him at him or yell at him when you see him move from the chair. That is childish. If you have seen him one inch from the chair he must get pain, even should he go back when he sees you. He won't get the penalty the moment he left the chair. We do not recall our children under five taking the risk of leaving the chair when being punished.

You Are the One

by ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS
Three young airline hostesses, TIBBY LANE, sweet and natural; STEENA WINTERUS, beautiful and sophisticated; and MARG BAKER, plain, sturdy and direct, share an apartment together in New York, where they are based. A friend of Tibby's, TOMMY DARE, is spending his first year out of medical school at a clinic in Brooklyn.

CHAPTER FIVE
YESTERDAY: Marg warns Tibby not to let Steena see Tommy.

IT HAD BEEN several weeks since Dr. Tommy Dare had called on Tibby. She had not had a chance to carry out her resolution to look after him. He had phoned a time or two to ask how she was getting on, but he had not said anything about seeing her. He had said that he was extremely busy, too tired, after clinic hours, to budge.

Which may, or may not, have been the explanation as to why he stayed away. Tibby did not know why she should feel hurt that he would not make the effort to come out, but she did. He couldn't be THAT tired, she told herself, fiercely. Maybe he had found someone else to have fun with, although that should be no concern of hers, either. Except that she had made a resolution to make it so, if she kept an eye on him.

She had asked if he was getting anything more filling than black coffee. "You should eat three good meals a day!" she had insisted urgently. "You know that, Tommy."

And wear my overshoes when it rains and brush my teeth and wash behind my ears. Tommy's voice had held indulgent laughter. "Yes, I know, Tib. But please, don't YOU start trying to be a mother to me. I have other ideas."

Maybe she was the mother type that Marg had spoken about, but a sister, or a very old friend, would be the same interest. After she had hung up Tibby wondered what Tommy's other ideas were. He had put such significance into that phrase, although she decided, as the days passed with him still keeping himself so scarce, as far as she was concerned, that she must have imagined it. Tommy's main, and sole idea was to become a good doctor. He could not allow girls—even Tibby—to take his mind off that.

Meantime Tibby had enough to occupy her own mind without worrying about Tommy or any other man, especially that day when she received an unexpected call to report for a flight a day sooner than scheduled and found herself in a really serious predicament.

"Didn't my uniform come back from the cleaners yesterday?" She turned from the hall closet where she kept her belongings, with an anxious pucker between her smooth brows. "They promised to deliver it. I said I couldn't leave it unless they did."

"Isn't it there?" Marg answered Tibby's question with another. She was manicuring her nails, so she did not look up.

"No, it isn't," Tibby made a final careful search. "You don't suppose Steena hung it in your room . . . though she wouldn't do that, and she never hangs anything up. I'll phone and see what happened. They'll have to get it here within a half hour or I'll be late. And then will I get a dressing down from Miss Picklepuus?"

"I don't believe it'll do any good to phone," Marg still did not look up. She flicked the file back and forth with ever more vigor.

"You mean they couldn't make it . . . but what will I do?" There was real distress stamped on Tibby's sweet face. To be late was almost an unpardonable offense. Hostesses were supposed to check in at the flight control office one hour before each flight. They received a digest of flight conditions, a rough plan of the altitude at which they would fly, and the passenger list.

"No, that wasn't what I meant," there was a distressed look on Marg's honest face, too.

"Well, what did you . . . Marg, I don't believe it'll do any good to phone," Marg still did not look up. She flicked the file back and forth with ever more vigor.

"Didn't my uniform come back from the cleaners yesterday?"

what's wrong? You act so funny. If you know something about my uniform, or are trying to tease me . . .

"I'm not teasing," Marg flung the file aside, looked at Tibby now. "I'm afraid I do know, but that won't help you out. And I'm sure Steena didn't know you'd be called a day earlier. Even Steena wouldn't pull that mean a trick . . ."

"Whatever are you talking about? I haven't much more time, you know. Though thank goodness I had my hair and nails done yesterday. But a lot of good that'll do without my uniform, as you said. . . . Where is my uniform, Marg?"

"I'm afraid it's on Steena," Marg's tone was dry. "On Steena! But she wouldn't . . . You mean she helped herself to my uniform when it came back?" Tibby had to sink down on the couch for support to digest this information.

"She didn't know you'd need it. She got an unexpected call, too—to pose for some publicity stunt. I suppose she thought yours would look better. Our Steena must look her best, you know."

"She might have asked!" The hot color stood out in Tibby's cheeks. "I suppose I'll have to borrow hers, then, even if it won't be as good a fit and is probably flung in a corner in a bell."

"I'm afraid it isn't even in good condition," Marg's tone still was dry. "Steena said she spilled something down its front and so she left it in her locker at the airport, with instructions for the porter to pick it up. You'd be welcome to mine."

She added, "If only you wouldn't swim in it. Too bad I'm so bulky and so much longer in the legs and arms—and that you and Steena are both the same pint sizes."

"What will I do?" Tibby asked once more. She would be late now. She would have to take her medicine for that. But unless she could find a uniform she could not check in at all. To miss a flight was an unpardonable sin. She would not be called down; she would lose her job.

"Maybe you can locate one at the field," Marg suggested hopefully. "Lots of the girls keep their uniforms there so they can change at the port." But her tone did not hold much hope. Uniforms were a ticklish subject. They had to be kept in readiness, sponged and pressed. Very few girls were willing to risk loaning them. As they were expensive, very few owned an extra one.

Aniseikonia, Rare Disease of Eye, Destroys Normal Binocular Vision

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

One of my readers has been interested in the statement she saw in the newspapers that a prominent lecturer had been cured of aniseikonia and wanted me to explain something of the nature of the disease and the way it is treated.

Aniseikonia is a very rare and peculiar disease of the eyes in which the patient apparently loses his ability to maintain normal binocular vision. We have very little knowledge of how we manage to achieve binocular vision.

Conditions in Infancy
It is probable that a baby looking at a certain object sees two objects and sees them upside down. Somehow or other in the course of the first six months of life we are able to train our eyes so that we reverse the image so that it is right side up, we fuse the two images so that we see only one and we also see perspective. In other words, we see the object in spatial relation to depth.

When these functions get disturbed they are often difficult, but sometimes easy to correct. For instance, the external muscles may become paralyzed which would throw the eyes off-balance and cause double vision. This can be corrected by glasses, but the trouble in aniseikonia is that the individual sees two images of unequal size. For instance, looking at a chair, he not only sees two chairs, but one of them is larger than the other.

This obviously cannot be corrected with any simple form of glasses and oculists have been studying it for fifteen or twenty years without making a great deal of progress until recently. The credit for the successful correction of aniseikonia belongs to Dr. Adelbert

Ames, Jr., at the Dartmouth Eye Institute in Hanover, New Hampshire.

Other Troubles
The individual with aniseikonia is subject to a large number of other troubles with his eyes. He is likely to be sensitive to light, to have car and train sickness, pain in his eyes, and naturally he has excessive nervousness and is either unable to read at all or unable to read over long periods.

A number of physicians have felt that a large part of this condition is due to neuroasthenia and can be corrected by psychology.

Advances Made
It is not to be expected that the details of these treatments will be understood by the average reader of this article. My only purpose in writing it is to tell those who have been afflicted for some time and who may have been discouraged that the present time advances have been made in the diagnostic classification of the disease and that there is treatment by lenses which will render them to have normal or nearly normal vision.

The fact that the lenses are a good deal of trouble and require considerable care and are quite expensive is of no consequence to the patient with aniseikonia because the disability is such as practically to disable him from performing any of the functions of life.

Questions and Answers
A. R.—Is it true that bad teeth, that is, teeth with jagged edges can cause cancerous growths on cheek, lip or tongue?
Answer: Yes. This is one of the principal dangers of teeth of that kind.

A. P. D.—In tuberculosis does calcium calcify tissue? Would a constant intake of calcium help to cause hardening of the arteries?
Answer: The body gets calcium in such large quantities under ordinary circumstances that these questions have no meaning. Calcification of inflamed areas is a good thing for the tuberculosis patient and calcification of the arteries does little, if any, harm, so it doesn't make a great deal of difference.

H. H.—When is the best time to give cod liver oil, before or after meals?
Answer: There is a general rule that any medicine is absorbed better on an empty stomach before meals than after and this applies to this question.

The boa constrictor of South America is the largest of snakes.

The Amazon river system is the largest in the world.

The Republican Party And "Isolationism"

WHAT The News said the other day about the misuse of the term "isolationism" in application to Republican policy is corroborated by an influential party newspaper, the Intelligencer, of Wheeling, W. V. It holds, as The News holds, that descriptions of the foreign policy part of the resolutions adopted by the party's national committee at Chicago as "abandonment" of the "isolationist" policy of the party have been entirely misleading.

"The Republican party," the Intelligencer declares, "is not and never has been 'isolationist.' We know of no official party declaration that can be interpreted as a determination to build a figurative Chinese wall about this country and let the rest of the world go bang. We know of no prominent figure in the Republican party who has advocated such a course."

"The Republican party always has stood for and always has promoted co-operation among nations and friendly intercourse, commercial and otherwise, between this and ALL other countries."

"But the Republican party has been 'nationalist' rather than 'internationalist.' It has felt that the first duty of an American government is to the American people. It has not felt that this country is called upon to solve the problems of the world at large; to assume the financial burdens of other peoples; to sacrifice material interests of the American people for the benefit of other peoples; to make the quarrels of our friends our quarrels; to rush to the aid of one nation or one group of nations in difficulties with another nation or group of nations."

"Mr. Roosevelt and those who belong to his international school of thought have pursued a diametrically opposed policy. To them, the United States is only a cog in the world machine, and useful only as it can contribute to the smooth functioning of the international mechanism. To them, the national welfare of the United States must always yield to the international need, as they see that need."

If those who have been misusing this term of isolationism with regard to Republican policy would only seek to understand this difference between nationalism and internationalism, they would have a better grasp of the political realities. They only make themselves ridiculous by their frivolous and inept employment of the term.

As the Intelligencer says, it is regrettable that any doubt should have been implanted that the party has defended itself against an unfounded charge, for any inference that the Republican party has failed in the past to support a proper policy of international co-operation and is now mending its ways, is "not in accordance with the record."

David Lawrence Writes For The Cumberland News

DAVID LAWRENCE, outstanding commentator on national affairs, will write a daily dispatch for The Cumberland News, beginning today. It will appear regularly on the editorial page.

Lawrence is qualified as few men to write authoritatively on day-to-day developments in our national life. For almost thirty years he has been studying and interpreting national affairs. He knows all the interwoven maze of government, politics and economics so well and recognizes trends so quickly that he has been able, with uncanny accuracy, to forecast the course of events in those fields.

Honestly and fearlessly, Lawrence chronicles what goes on exactly as he sees and appraises it. He doesn't hesitate to express opinions on current problems, because they are his own, unbiased by considerations of helping or hurting any political party or group. While he keeps his finger on the pulse of government through Democratic as well as Republican administrations, he is not affiliated with any political party. While he may at times be mistaken in his appraisals, his intention is to describe accurately and fairly and to analyze according to his best judgment the many phases of government which are today touching citizens in every walk of life.

The News trusts, as it believes, its readers will be glad to have the Lawrence dispatches for their daily perusal.

Fiorello Rides Again

MEN WHO ARE JUST BOYS, GROWN UP, have more and more occasion to envy Mayor (Fire-fighting) Fiorello LaGuardia. His honor has a new thing in breath-taking, on-the-go treasures — a "war car," no less, with top painted white and body green.

And get a load of this, fellows: On the green hood are the initials "NYC" and five white stars signifying metropolitan boroughs — one better than a full general's four regulation stars. In case of blackouts, there are two red emergency lights protruding from the front fenders. And the front of the car bears the shield of the mayor of New York City and five more stars. On the white top there is a red panel which, when lighted, flashes "Mayor" in a red glow.

Thus the mayor's perfectly understandable craving for noise and excitement has found the last word in "outs" from the law's delay and the insolence of office crasher; that Fiorello's patient merit might otherwise have to keep on taking. At the same time, he gives the public a thrilling treat and pedestrians a chance to see stars without getting hit.

In the circumstances, any night—preferably about theater time—would do nicely for a sort of Fiorello Reverie's ride to rouse the Manhattan citizenry to the coming of the Germans—with some distinguishable horn-blowing to signify whether by land, air or sea. Inferentially, the car has a sky-view top.

It would be just his honor's luck, though, to be slowing down somewhere in the neighborhood of the YWCA and have some dear old lady wave her umbrella and call "Taxi!"

The Disturbing Phase Of the National Debt

THAT the national debt may eventually reach $200,000,000,000 but that "the American system is equal to any burden it may have to carry," is the opinion of Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, as expressed in a recent address.

Depending on the length of the war and accentuated indications of ever increasing spending, Schram translated the mounting debt burden in terms of insurance of American destiny: "Whatever the cost of victory may be, the American people are prepared to pay it. War is never cheap—but it is a million times cheaper to win than to lose."

Mr. Schram's assurance as to the significance of the debt may be in order to reorient American confidence in the security of the American system. It cannot be construed as a categorical endorsement of whatever spending ways are officially adopted to finance the war effort.

The American people know the cost of victory, are willing to risk it to the limit, and are committed to take the stress of it in stride. It is a case of billions for survival—no quarter with wasteful misdirection prejudicial to that goal.

What disturbs the American people today is not the national debt, but persistent indications of a trend of financial irresponsibility in the conduct of America's war fortunes that cannot but bode inefficiency in the conduct of the war effort. The conviction that even a war for survival is a business enterprise that must be conducted—for success—along strictly business lines, is an American tradition that dies hard.

Front-Seamed Hose For the Women

A NEW JERSEY MAN has obtained a patent for a full-fashioned stocking with the seam running from top to toe in front. "It is easier," says the inventor, "to see whether the stocking is straight on the leg. No twisting of the head or turning of the head is required. The front seam gives a slenderizing effect. The stockings will wear longer and resist runs."

Maybe so, but the first woman who comes down the street with a pair of those hose on is certain to have somebody with good intentions stop her and whisper that she has stockings on backwards.

An Italian physician is quoted as reporting that Musso has lost control of himself. And, he might have added, Italy.

Your Mirror

By MARSHALL MASLIN
How about your mirror? Not the one you think I mean, not the one in your bathroom that shows your face when you shave, not the flattering one in the bedroom that tells you you "look all right" and are ready for a public appearance. Not any of those mirrors you've looked at all your life.

I mean that other mirror that is inside of us. The one nobody but you has ever seen. The one no one else will ever see. Yours exclusively. Your private property. You can't break it, can't see it back, can't ever get rid of it. It will last as long as you live. Of course you CAN tarnish it and fog it—as the mirror in the bathroom is fogged when you take a hot shower—but you'll always see some reflection of yourself in it.

You may have noticed how people prepare themselves to look in mirrors. They straighten themselves, pull in their stomachs, adjust their neckties, stick out their chins, try to look charming, alluring, stalwart, aggressive for a few seconds of satisfied appraisal. . . Then they slump back to their old selves and go their way.

So we rarely see ourselves as really are—in mirrors. . . And we spend years out of lives in looking at ourselves in private mirrors without really seeing ourselves as we are. If we did, we'd change. If we did, we'd learn by experience and we don't.

But DON'T we learn by experience? I wish I believed we do, but I can't. We learn how to saw boards, add columns of figures, drive automobiles, cook meals, and other things by experience, but we rarely learn the important things in that way—things like being friendly and happy and likable. We flop on those and wonder why. We fail because we do not use That Mirror.

We keep on doing the same thing year after year, showing the same weaknesses, making the same silly mistakes because we never see ourselves clearly. I don't mean as others see us, but as we should see ourselves. . . We don't learn by experience unless at the same time we look in That Mirror, without primping, we say: "So that's ME, is it? So that's what I'm like? Then I'd better be making a few permanent changes."

You have such a mirror. So have I. And you know as well as I do that none of us can get ahead in this life unless we do our primping after we look in our private mirrors—and not before.

Citizens of Axis Birth Here Are In a Tough Spot

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Naturalized Americans of German birth are in hard luck just now. Even the nativeborn, whose parents or grandparents came here from Germany are objects of more or less suspicion, on account of their inherited German names, and familiarity, in some instances, with the old Fatherland's lingo. If they still speak a bit of it in their homes, as a few of them do, the neighbors pretty well take it for granted that they're out-and-out alien enemies, though they may never have so much as visited the country of their ancestry.

Some Better Off
Ex-Italians or Americans of Italian descent are a trifle better off, because it's recognized that a sizable proportion of their home folk are altogether out of sympathy with the Axis.

Being a Jap, though, or a couple of Japs' offspring or grandchild, is worst of all. A German or Italian descendant isn't sufficiently identifiable, as of enemy alien origin, to be spotted at sight, but a Mongolian can't get away with it, except, of course, by proving that he's a Chinese or Filipino. If he can do that—gosh!—what pats on the back!

Anglo-Saxons Only

A District of Columbia grand jury has been investigating the subject frantically of late and there isn't an Italian, a German or a Jap name in the list of questionables who've been yanked up to account for themselves. The names are Hudson, Baxter, Winrod, Stanley, Lyman, Coughlin, et cetera. Such monikers as Garigliano, Schurz and Kamakura have not figured a particle. Darned if the defeatist agitation doesn't seem to have been purely Anglo-Saxon.

That suspects shouldn't be watched isn't argued. Nevertheless, it's kinda tough on a past-generation German to be looked on as a probable subversive because he chances to be in the directory under his grandfather's designation—or a Jap's, even.

Italians Anti-Axis
I patronize an Italian barber, and an Italian cobbler fixes my shoes. I've conversed with 'em copiously. If anything they're more violently anti-Axis than anybody on Capitol Hill. It isn't put on. It's the genuine article. I'd bet my last cent on it.

I had a side-kick, of German grandparentage, in South America, during the last war. He'd been an Oklahoma farmer, and was as dyed-in-the-wool a Yankee as I am, but he and his family were chased into exile because he had a name with the Reich's brand on it. And when it was over, back they streaked it to Oklahoma, where I suppose they're experiencing the same old hates. That outfit was as American as George Washington.

And Japs?

The Case of Kawakami
Years ago a Jap named K. K. Kawakami located in the United States as a correspondent for Nipponese newspapers. He married here—an American woman. They had a son, American born and an American citizen—Clarke Kawakami. At the Pearl Harbor juncture he had the tough luck to be Washington representative of the Tokyo news agency, Domei. Instantly he wanted to get into the U. S. army, to fight the Mikado. And, at last accounts, the Army wouldn't accept him, as a Jap suspect. It makes him sore, and I don't blame him. If there's any doubt about him, he ought to be given the benefit of the doubt of it, I'd think.

President Roosevelt evidently has the right idea on the issue. His order is to have suspects strictly investigated but to give 'em clean bills of health if they're entitled to 'em.

May Be Useful

Furthermore, he points out that they may turn out to be extra-useful at the game of back-firing against alien enemies that they understand better than we do.

Anyway, calling a man disloyal because there's some question on which he disagrees with you, isn't

HOW CAN ANYONE THINK OF HIS OWN PROFITS, WAGES, HOURS, OR POLITICAL GAIN THESE DAYS?

Sullivan Says Wage Control Is Crucial Point of President's Message Monday

By MARK SULLIVAN

Next week—Monday is the expected day—President Roosevelt will send a message to Congress. That evening he will address the country by radio. The following day, Price Administrator Leon Henderson will issue orders putting a ceiling, a top limit, on the price of practically everything. Later in the week, several steps will be taken to carry out the program which President Roosevelt is to announce.

The central aim of all this is "anti-inflation." To this, the other parts of the program are necessary. The other subjects to be treated include: price control, wage and salary control, profit control, installment selling control, credit control, and, finally, defense bonds. That these should be united in one address and one program, is appropriate, for they belong together in fact. If the administration deals wisely with all these, this country may escape inflation—and by that escape much harm and distress.

Let us start with defense bonds.

This week a drive is on to sell them to literally every adult in the country, and to as many children as have a few pennies to buy the small denomination stamps. The drive is nation-wide, and door to door. It is quite successful. One of the forces of volunteer sellers, in a community I am familiar with, sold to a community of nineteen families he called on. Practically every American family is going to be an owner of defense bonds.

Extravagance a Deterrent

The people buy these bonds gladly, in most cases with a sense of pleasure, almost exaltation. They buy because they feel they thus help fight the war. If they think their money is used for purposes other than war, or extravagantly, the people become a little sour on buying bonds. Purchases were at their peak in January, reflecting patriotic emotion over Pearl Harbor. They fell off nearly fifty per cent in February. One quite natural reason was, use of funds to pay income taxes.

Other reasons, psychological, were three widely publicized conditions—extravagant frills in the Office of Civilian Defense under Mrs. Roosevelt; pensions to Congressmen; the forty-hour week with time and a half and double time for extra hours. It was a crude way of criticizing conduct of the war—but it worked. The first two conditions were ended promptly, and the labor leaders have surrendered double time.

The thing to apprehend now about defense bonds, and to prevent, is inflation. That is the central reason President Roosevelt speaks next week. Inflation would mean prices of goods rising higher—doubling, or tripling, or more. If that should happen, the real value of defense bonds would shrivel in their owners' hands. The dollar paid for a defense bond today will buy, for example, some fifteen pounds of sugar. If inflation comes, the dollar which the defense holder gets back some years from now might buy only ten pounds, or five, or less.

Such a depreciation in the real value of defense bonds would destroy the people's faith. No president, no person in authority, would willingly be responsible for that. It would be a tragedy second only to losing the war.

Firm on Farm Prices

Preventing inflation means, preventing excessive rise in prices. Rise in prices begins, mainly with rise in price of food. Toward preventing that, President Roosevelt has already acted promptly, decisively, and with success thus far. He stood firm against further rise in prices of farm crops, when farm spokesmen in Congress insisted upon further rise—when indeed some farm politicians demanded no limit on that rise. Today, farmers generally are fairly content with present prices of their crops (regardless of what farm politicians may say). What farmers now want is that the prices of what they buy—of goods generally—be kept down. That is also the wish of the public generally.

For keeping down prices generally, prices of all sorts of goods, there is an agency and a law. It is the Price Control Administration, under Mr. Leon Henderson. He has power to set ceilings on practically everything (except wages). He has already set ceilings on many lines of goods. Next week he is expected to set ceilings on nearly everything, a more or less universal price ceiling—except wages.

A Crucial Point

There remains wages. What Mr. Roosevelt says about wages will be the most carefully watched point in his address next week. The history of administration policy about wages began last fall. When, in writing the general price control bill, it was proposed to include wages, many administration authorities said never, no never. This, it is necessary to assume, was a political attitude rather than an economic one. After price control got under way, it became apparent that unless wages were restrained, nothing else could be. Dawning light began to emerge from some quarters of the administration. Mrs. Roosevelt wrote in her newspaper column that there had been a discussion in the White House. Reflecting the discussion, Mrs. Roosevelt emitted a glimmer of economic light:

"It seems to me there should be an immediate freezing of prices of profits, and of wages; no one can be frozen without freezing all."

The attitude of labor leaders has been one of firm resistance to wage control. Whether Mr. Roosevelt assents, or dissents, or tries to devise some compromise course, we shall know next week.

Danger Is Seen In Skirting Law On Labor Issue

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, April 24—The dangers of by-passing and ignoring the legislative branch of the government in making laws governing employer-employee relations were never more conspicuously illustrated than in the controversy that has arisen as to whether the employers of America are bound to submit to arbitration the issue of compulsory unionization of their employees.

Last December, President Roosevelt called a conference of representatives of industry and labor to see if there could be found a common ground for the settlement of labor disputes. The meeting was primarily to decide what might be done about the compulsory unionization issue. The conference almost went on the rocks of complete disagreement but finally each side presented its views to President Roosevelt.

Closed Shop Shut Out

The employers specifically stated that they would accept the War Labor Board as a tribunal to decide about the peaceful settlement of labor disputes but that the closed shop of compulsory unionization issue was not to be included within the scope of arbitration by the board.

Mr. Roosevelt chose to disregard the reservations in the final letter of the twelve employer representatives and issued an edict stating that "all" disputes were to be submitted to the War Labor Board. The letter was read and the conference promptly was adjourned.

That same night the employer group issued a public statement reiterating its views that the closed shop issue was not included in the understanding of the jurisdiction of the new War Labor Board.

Agreement Breaking Alleged

Now both the C. I. O. and the F. of L. are publicly declaring that the employer representatives who attended President Roosevelt's conference in December have broken their agreement by opposing the submission of all disputes to the War Labor Board.

Chairman Davis, of the War Labor Board, attended these conferences last December and he has publicly taken issue with the spokesmen of the management group of the conference thereby siding with the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. interpretation of what took place.

The employer group has issued a statement calling attention to the formal communication of last December and the press release. The matter rests.

The Vital Question

But the vital question is whether anybody in America can be made party to an agreement with a president of the United States who no such consent has been given. Can Mr. Roosevelt impose his will on any group and tell them what wants done even though there is no sanction in law or the constitution for such a decree?

Some weeks previous Mr. Roosevelt in a public statement said would be Hitler-like to force an employer to accept the closed shop and that such an agreement would be valid only when it is voluntarily arrived at.

The president said at the time that Congress had not legislated the closed shop and probably never would. Now, however, he has reversed himself on the issue or believes that the War Labor Board can do what Congress is unwilling to do.

Interpretations Differ

The chairman of the War Labor Board, Mr. Davis, insists that it is difficult turns largely on terminology and that a "union-maintenance" clause inserted in contracts at the order of the War Labor Board does not mean the "closed shop" or the "union shop." But employers think otherwise and insist that once any citizen is obliged to remain in a union against his will, the element of compulsion arises and that in time of war especially, no citizen should be required to pay dues to a private organization as the price of admission to the production front.

One argument made in behalf of "union maintenance" classes is that in some instances employers are alleged to be discouraging new men from remaining in unions. But it is punishable under the War Labor Relations act which is on the statute books and it is a mystery why for any such reason a union security clause is needed, long as the Wagner law is enforced.

Cresaptown Church Celebration Will Be Held Sunday

Congregation Will Mark Sixth Anniversary of Methodist Edifice

Members of Cresaptown Methodist church will celebrate the sixth anniversary of the dedication of the present church building Sunday. There will be three services during the day.

At 11 a. m. the present pastor, the Rev. Joseph J. Tibbitts will preach at 2:30 p. m. District Superintendent Rev. O. B. Langrill will have charge of the service and at 7:45 p. m. a former pastor, the Rev. William W. Patterson will deliver the sermon. At all of these services there will be special music furnished by the combined adult and junior choirs. At the evening service Florin Wilson of Cumberland will be the guest soloist.

Many interesting facts concerning the early history of Methodism in this region. It is an established fact that Francis Asbury, first Methodist Bishop in America, preached at Cresaptown, and as it is thought, dedicated the first church here.

Dr. Frank G. Porter writes "Asbury was in that section of the country as early as the summer of 1782. He writes that in June 1782 he was on Patterson Creek, North Branch of Potomac, crossed the Knollys Mountain and stopped at Colonel (Joseph) Cresap's near what we used to know as Brady's Mill."

There are many other references that Bishop Asbury made about this section of the country. On June 30, 1784, Asbury preached to a large congregation at Joseph Cresap's with freedom of spirit and utterance. August 1804 he lodged at Joseph Cresap's and preached at Cresap's Mill.

"His first mention of Cresaptown by name was on June 29, 1806. 'I preached in the chapel at Cresaptown.' How long before this the chapel was built I do not know, but Mrs. Harriet Cresap Wilson, grandmother of Robert C. Wilson, heard Asbury preach there when she was twelve years of age. Being born in 1796 would make that date 1808."

Joseph Cresap First Leader
The first class leader at Cresaptown was Joseph Cresap, appointed by Bishop Asbury before any chapel was built. The Bishop, in the seventeenth century, urged Daniel Van Meter of Cresaptown to go to the State of Ohio. The Bishop lodged with Van Meter there in 1803."

The present church officials are: Trustees: Jacob Richardson, M. O. Van Meter, H. E. Robinson, W. A. Jody, Ralph Wright, Trubador Lewis, G. E. Broadwater, W. T. Lewis, J. P. Van Meter.

Color and Fabric Contrasts Mark Fashion Review

Wearability Stressed at Party for Benefit of Local Charities

Wearability was stressed in the showing of fashions from Martins by members of the Junior Volunteer Service Corps at the party for the benefit of local charities, they sponsored last evening at the All Ghan Shrine Country Club.

Judging from the number of slacks shown, they have finally come into their own and are here to stay for quite some time. Color combinations were outstanding including a sun dash, sea foam, and lip stick red combination. The patriotic note was apparent with a nautical number of navy blue silk piped with red and made with the long torso. Play suits were also shown in this group.

Contrasts in Color
Color contrasts and contrasts of fabrics marked the day-time cottons which stressed pique, seerucker and chambray as well as liners in the spectator sports. The colors predominating in the group included, sun-gold, tropic-blue and Hawaiian-pink. Two of the outstanding models in this group were a tattersall check with gingham trim on skirt and jacket; and for the "mix match enthusiasts" a pleated skirt of blue sheer crepe, with white persey blouse with long sleeves and a butcher linen red jerkin.

In the dressy day times one of the most striking models was a lip-stick red front print, accented with green on a white background. The large spring flower motif on white highlighted this group. The feminine note was shown to be of extreme importance in this group, with rick-rack trim, and peasant embroidery, pinnles and pleats, the two piece dress was again stressed.

Striking Formal Dresses
The South American influence was shown in two of the formal dresses, the most striking of which was a combination of Kelly green, lip-stick red and white chiffon. Marquessette, mouseline de soie, eyelet, embroidery jersey and indelible chintz held sway in this group. The flower motif was again shown and one of the most feminine was a love-bird silk with a powder-puff skirt and trimmed with a magnolia blossom.

Miss Margaret Coulehan was commentator, models included Mrs. George Schwarzenbach, Mrs. Robert McA. King, Mrs. Paul Fletcher, Mrs. H. B. McNally, Mrs. G. William Bibby, Mrs. L. Leslie Helmer, Mrs. R. Arden Lowndes, Mrs. Mortimer Carr Schaidt, Mrs. John W. McClure, Jr., and Mrs. W. Royce Hodges, Jr.

Prizing the fashion review duplicate bridge, contract, 500 set-back and dominoes were played.

Prizes were awarded in contract to Mrs. Milton Beneman, Mrs. Max Moore, Mrs. Frederick Eller, Mrs. A. W. Resser, Mrs. Joseph Miller, Mrs. Charles McFerran, Dr. A. Smith, Harry Parker, Gordon L. Bowie and John Loud. Miss Betty Schlinger received the award for 500 and in duplicate bridge Mrs. William Somerville, Mrs. Russ Minter, Mrs. Robert Meyer and Mrs. T. S. Waller, C. Dennison, A. ## Doctors Report Improvement in Treating Cancer

Many Helped by Combining Artificial Fever with X-Rays

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
ST. PAUL, April 24 (AP)—Good results in treating fifty cases of cancer with combined artificial fever of 104 to 106 degrees with X-rays was announced by the American College of Physicians here.

The fifty were negroes, supposed hopeless. Thirty-nine have improved. In a few all signs of the cancer have disappeared. Eleven the patients had absolutely no results.

The experiment has been under way for about two years at Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn., and was reported by Doctors Edward L. Turner, dean of medicine, and S. S. Shoulders, professor of radiology and Lawrence D. Scott, assistant professor of radiology.

Better Than X-Rays
They said they believed the results are better than use of X-rays alone. X-rays are one of the standard methods of curing cancer, with success in a certain percentage of cases. Where X-rays fail the reason is held to be lack of sensitivity to the malignant growth to the rays.

The purpose in adding the fever is to increase the sensitivity of the cancer. For years there have been medical speculations that heat somehow enable the rays to attack cancer more effectively.

The Nashville test is the first of the experiment. The Meharry doctors pointed out that they gave the patients while they were still in the fever machine. The patients' cases include fourteen different types and sites of human cancer.

Discuss Problems of Age
The army of about 4,000,000 Americans will not have to register for the next week because they are 65.

The size of this aging group was brought out in a symposium on problems of aging. No exact figures are available, but the total number of over-sixty fives in the United States is about 9,000,000. The estimate is that 5,000,000 are women.

Every one had the low death rate of ten-year-olds, the average of life in the United States is 53.5 years. The doctors expected in aging want to add a few of these lost years to life, just to get started.

Government Goes to the Kitchen to Curb Prices

Raises Ceilings on China, Pottery and Other Articles

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—The government has carried its campaign for raising living costs into the kitchen, cupboard and closet by placing ceilings on china and pottery and a long list of cotton goods including sheets, blankets, towels and gingham.

In addition, a permanent price ceiling has been put on used egg crates, an item in the cost of eggs.

Two major orders affected the manufacturers' level in the case of cotton, should be about "considerably lower" than those prevailing. OPA said.

The china order, covering dishes of china and pottery items, including cups, saucers, dishes and bowls, was in effect a decrease of a price boost requested in January.

The cotton products action, supplementing seven existing price ceilings on cotton yarns and goods, will practically every product of the cotton textile industry under government control. Price Administrator Henderson said.

It is effective May 4 and bases prices on the levels prevailing July 1, 1941. The ceiling is flexible one, designed to let prices fluctuate with raw cotton quotations.

A SITUATION WELL IN HAND

American doughboy technique upholds that famed United States tradition—"the marines have landed and have the situation well in hand." Two members of the A.E.F. in Australia stroll along the banks of the Yarra River with a couple of pretty Australian girls. Many American soldiers have already captured the hearts of girls from the continent down under and married them.

Don't you think it would be well to be as frank with Dick as you have been with me? I'm sure he'll understand. Say you were mistaken and are sorry. At the same time, don't be too humble; that doesn't do. We all make mistakes. Tell Dick that, feeling as you did toward this young man, it was only a sense of fairness that caused you to tell him how you felt at once.

I feel confident, if some other girl hasn't annexed Dick in the meantime, that things will be even better than they were before.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Likes Former Boy Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old and went steady with my boy friend for six months. We were very much in love and hoped to marry some day in the not-too-distant future.

All of a sudden another young man came into my life and nearly swept me off my feet. He took me out, bought me flowers and candy and wanted to marry me. I thought I had at last found my ideal and told my boy friend how things stood. I told him I hoped we could remain good friends always.

For a month or so everything went along all right, and then the new young man seemed to lose interest. I came to the conclusion that I didn't like him so much after all. I'm pretty sure I hurt Dick very much and I feel terrible, but the question is how can I get Dick back? I really want him very much, and not the new young man at all.

JERRY.

Don't you think it would be well to be as frank with Dick as you have been with me? I'm sure he'll understand. Say you were mistaken and are sorry. At the same time, don't be too humble; that doesn't do. We all make mistakes. SAN JUAN, P. R. (AP)—A hurried survey specialist for the War Production Board, that there was enough old iron scattered around Puerto Rico to build 500 light tanks.

TODAY'S VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

POINTS ON CULTIVATING VICTORY GARDEN

Destruction of weed seedlings is the principal object of cultivating. Do not cultivate when the soil is wet. As soon as it is dry enough, break the upper crust to prevent the surface soil from baking.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, early in the season one can cultivate deep and fairly close to the plant. Later, as the roots grow, cultivation should be shallow and further back.

Cultivate between the plants as well as along the rows. If the weeds are very small, it will not be necessary to remove them as they will quickly wither after being uprooted. Cultivating should be done when the plants and weeds are wet, either from rain or dew, as the cultivator might spread fungous disease spores from diseased weeds and plants. This precaution is especially advisable when weeding beans.

Breakfast Suggestions

It's patriotic to start the family right each morning. Serve 'em simply but include fruit in season. Choice of cereal, breakfast meat, eggs prepared in a snappy new way, and good coffee or milk.

A Good Tonic

Turn to stewed rhubarb and prunes, blended but cooked separately, as an interesting spring tonic. It's a fine "builder-upper" well stocked with minerals needed for the blood.

Don't turn up your nose at the ABC's in food. Vitamins are just as important as the alphabet to your children. Proper nutrition for the babies of today insures the vigor of the nation of tomorrow, says Dr. Sophie Rabinoff, who supervises four large health clinics in New York, checking the diets of some 8,000 pre-school toddlers.

Mothers are flocking to New York City's health clinics in increasing numbers these days, as America grows nutrition conscious. The things they are learning may turn out a new generation of supermen and women, if the new-found secrets of nutrition magic hold true. The possibility of food rationing in this country need not frighten you, says Dr. Rabinoff. It hasn't hurt the children of England—they are healthier than before the war, when England was a nation of meat eaters. English mothers have learned the health-giving qualities of simple foods, because they were placed on rations.

Dr. Rabinoff says, "Our courses in nutrition are for the benefit of families on low-cost budgets, and we are showing them how to get a balanced diet for their children even though they cannot afford expensive foods."

A knowledge of protective foods reveals, for example, that the sugar shortage which has hit us is not such a calamity after all. While sugar has caloric value, it has no protective element. On the other hand, its humble substitute, molasses, has both caloric value and iron.

peanuts are not only good to eat but they are rich in proteins, fats and vitamins, and are unusually abundant this season as a billion and a half pounds were raised on American farms in 1941. The housewife who still likes to make her own bread, and even the one who never does, will want to try this novel recipe. The recipe makes one large loaf.

Ingredients: one and one-half cups sifted flour; two teaspoons baking powder; one-half teaspoon baking soda; one-half teaspoon salt; one cup bran; one-half cup chopped peanuts; one-half cup shortening; one-half cup sugar; one egg; one teaspoon vanilla; one and one-fourth cup mashed bananas; two tablespoons water.

Directions: Mix and sift flour, baking powder, soda and salt; stir in bran and nuts. Cream shortening until soft; add sugar, egg, and vanilla, and beat until light. Add dry ingredients alternately with mixture of bananas and water, mixing well each time. Bake in greased loaf pan three-quarters of an hour.

Don't turn up your nose at the ABC's in food. Vitamins are just as important as the alphabet to your children. Proper nutrition for the babies of today insures the vigor of the nation of tomorrow, says Dr. Sophie Rabinoff, who supervises four large health clinics in New York, checking the diets of some 8,000 pre-school toddlers.

Mothers are flocking to New York City's health clinics in increasing numbers these days, as America grows nutrition conscious. The things they are learning may turn out a new generation of supermen and women, if the new-found secrets of nutrition magic hold true. The possibility of food rationing in this country need not frighten you, says Dr. Rabinoff. It hasn't hurt the children of England—they are healthier than before the war, when England was a nation of meat eaters. English mothers have learned the health-giving qualities of simple foods, because they were placed on rations.

Dr. Rabinoff says, "Our courses in nutrition are for the benefit of families on low-cost budgets, and we are showing them how to get a balanced diet for their children even though they cannot afford expensive foods."

A knowledge of protective foods reveals, for example, that the sugar shortage which has hit us is not such a calamity after all. While sugar has caloric value, it has no protective element. On the other hand, its humble substitute, molasses, has both caloric value and iron.

peanuts are not only good to eat but they are rich in proteins, fats and vitamins, and are unusually abundant this season as a billion and a half pounds were raised on American farms in 1941. The housewife who still likes to make her own bread, and even the one who never does, will want to try this novel recipe. The recipe makes one large loaf.

THE DAILY STORY

ROLL OF DRUMS

Drums Are Either Stirring or Sad, Depending on What Side of the Ocean You Happen To Be Sitting

(Copyright by United Feature Syndicate)

By ANTHONY VANE

"The roll of drums, son, is infinitely stirring," David said to Bart as they rested in the noonday heat from plowing the rye field, "or it is infinitely sad. There is no middle ground between."

David had seen the light of interest flare in young Bart's eyes the moment the thin, exciting ruffle of sound had come from the village over the fallow fields. In town the citizens' committee was having a parade. The war in Europe was creeping insidiously into men's veins—the parade was for a relief organization to send help to oppressed peoples 3,000 miles away.

The music from the band sounded detached, like a radio program when the volume is turned down low. Bart listened.

"I wish I was there, dad," he said wistfully. His eyes tried to pierce the distance to town, his mind building up an image of the parade. "The Legion and the V. F. W. and the Guard regiment from over Kendallville way will all be marching. I'll bet it's a sight, all right."

David took a considered swig from the dew-headed jug of buttermilk that Susie had brought out late in the morning and placed in the shade of the willows by the creek. Bart was, he thought suddenly, of an age to like such things. Eighteen, nearly. Bart was now.

"Our family doesn't hold with

war, son. If that's what's running through that mind of yours. It's just like the story of the Pied Piper. I wasn't studying to get into any war, dad. There isn't much chance anyway, being that we Americans aren't at war. I just like to think sometimes, about being a soldier. That doesn't do any harm, does it?"

"It's that kind of thinking that makes wars, Bart," David said with perfect seriousness. "If enough people think about how fine it is to have flashy uniforms and bands and parades and how fine it would be to take new land from other people by force, you can't help having a war. Dictators would go out of business if the people all sat back and fused to play the dictator's game!"

Bart didn't answer, but David could see that he was thinking. And his eyes still shone at the sound of the drums.

The war that summer hit closer and closer to home. David had one brother and several cousins in England, all of them fighting against the menace from the East. They received letters periodically from remote relatives in Canada who had joined the Canadian forces. Bart was increasingly agitated. "I'm past 18 now, dad," he said to David at the end of summer. "Cousin Al said in his letter that if I went up to Toronto there'd be a good chance of getting in the army flying school there, and maybe get a commission before the end of the year?"

"You're young, Bart, and you haven't had enough experience of the world yet to be able to judge clearly," David told him. "There's no cause for you to involve yourself in other people's quarrels, any more than you'd interfere in a scrap between a couple of the boys at school. We'll hear no more of it."

"What you say doesn't make sense, exactly," Bart considered. "Grandfather went to war in the Civil War, and we had four uncles in the Spanish-American War, and even you were in the first World War. What is the difference? Were those wars any different?"

David remained silent for a while, thinking the question over fairly. Bart was a good boy. He deserved an honest answer to an honest question. But how was one to tell an 18-year-old that answer? "Maybe those wars were mistakes, too, Bart. Maybe we all were wrong in helping to carry them on."

"Then you won't allow me to tell Al I might think of coming up to Toronto?"

"No, Bart. I'm afraid I won't, and that's final!"

The news came over the radio that Sunday afternoon, a couple of weeks before Christmas, while the family was eating their Sunday dinner. The calmness of the newscaster's voice made it seem unreal—it didn't seem possible that the nation was suddenly plunged into a state of war.

They listened, their food cooling on the plates. Honolulu bombed, the army field wrecked, enemy planes flying over the Islands dropping bombs on American property and American citizens.

David looked at his strapping silver producer.

Protestburg Not Ready for Test,
Kerr Says

Business Men Still Have Not Arranged Outside
Light Switches

FROSTBURG, April 24—Many of the proprietors of business houses in Frostburg, after months of warning, still not prepared for an air raid blackout, Earl Kerr, chief warden in Frostburg stated today.

Following the first test blackout, Kerr said, owners of business houses in the section were requested to make preparation to have the lights turned off by an outside switch by the air raid warden.

Must Be Arranged
Kerr stated today, and added that it is not fair to expect the business men in the community and turn the lights off.

Most cases, Kerr said, arguments for exterior switches are a very small expense and the situation must be taken care of at once in preparation for the first test blackout scheduled for Monday night.

Time Not Known
The time of the first alert or the time the blackout will be made known, Kerr said, it is the hope of all officials that everyone will do their part to assure 100 per cent efficiency, since Col. Henry S. State air raid director, will be present to check on county defense unit.

County Will Take Most of Summer

OAKLAND, April 24—A reassessment of all property in the county, made necessary this year because of a state law to that effect, began Monday, according to R. C. McComas, supervisor of assessments, with six assessors appointed by the county commissioner, assigned to the job.

The six men who have been employed are Benjamin DeWitt, Martin Savage, Orlando Welch, Chester A. Green, John Beitzel and George Houck.

There was a reassessment in 1937 and the law makes it mandatory to have one every five years unless it is postponed by Legislative act. The passage of such an act was neglected by this and a number of counties, but an attempt was made the first of the year to get a ruling from the State Tax Commission, which would have made such a reassessment unnecessary in this county. This ruling was not obtained from the commission and Garrett as well as other counties have to allow for the expense in the annual levies. Garrett county levied $10,000 to cover the cost of the work.

The six assessors will be busy most of the summer, McComas stated. They will review the present assessment of every taxpayer.

Two, soon-to-be pilots, in the Royal Air Force, now in training in the United States, "invaded" Oakland this week but their's was a mission of peace and good will—particularly for some young women of the community.

These young men have been in the United States for about seven months and are training to become pilots at Gunter Field, Montgomery, Ala. Following an advanced course in flying which they expect to begin within about a week, they will return to the country and take up the fight against the Axis.

Public Assistance Expenditures Are Increasing in Garrett, Ogburn Says

Increase for Year Amounts to $18,523.15, Welfare
Secretary States

OAKLAND, April 24—That expenditures for various types of public assistance in Garrett county were increasing, due to higher living costs, was announced by Mrs. Dorothy Ogburn, executive secretary of the county welfare board, in releasing the figures for March, 1942.

The figures showed that expenditures last month amounted to $18,523.15, including administration costs, and that 1,034 people were assisted. There has also been a slight increase in the number of persons receiving assistance, Mrs. Ogburn said.

"Since the Garrett County Welfare Board does not assist employable people, the added opportunities for employment have little or no effect upon the agency's program," she pointed out.

The increase in expenditures in March, 1942, over March, 1941, amounted to $2,280.37. Mrs. Ogburn said this increase was primarily because of increased costs of living. She said a study of current food costs was completed in January, 1942, which showed that it was costing families much more to buy food this year than it had cost the previous year. "Consequently budgets were increased as funds would permit, to take care of the higher living costs."

Thirty-Three Fires
Reported in Two Days, Huttlen Says

Burning Permits Are Revoked in Eight Counties
until Rain Falls

With 2,000 acres of mountain land burned over within the last forty-eight hours, H. E. Hutter, district forester, Moorefield, W. Va., last night revoked all brush burning permits in eight West Virginia counties until the next substantial rainfall.

Hutter said thirty-three fires were reported in the last two days. One of them had burned over 800 acres in Berkeley county by 7 o'clock last night and had not yet been brought under control.

The order cancelling the brush burning permits follows: "All persons in Hardy, Grant, Pendleton, Hampshire, Mineral, Berkeley, Morgan and Jefferson counties, West Virginia, are notified to stop burning brush until a substantial rain falls. All permits granted are hereby revoked and cancelled. New permits must be acquired before brush can be burned."

Burning Since Wednesday
From 100 to 200 men have been fighting the large fire in Berkeley county, Hutter said. The conflagration broke out Wednesday, appeared to be extinguished Thursday night and then broke out again yesterday morning.

Most of the other fires, ranging in size from fifteen to 150 acres, have been put out, Hutter said, although four or five still were burning late last night. He said he believed they would be under control by midnight.

High school boys, trained as forest fire fighters before the season opened, have been helping to combat the flames this year in place of CCC boys who were a "great help" in past years, Hutter said. There are no more CCC camps in the area.

Fires Numerous This Year
Forest fires this year have been more numerous than in recent seasons, Hutter pointed out, explaining that dryness of the ground helps the flames to spread. Smoke from some of the fires could be seen easily at some points on U. S. Route 40, east of Cumberland.

Hutter attributed the fires to incendiaries, range burners, brush burners and carelessness. He estimated that fifteen per cent are started by brush burning, adding that range burners cause most of the big conflagrations.

Jury Disagrees In Damage Suit Against City

Collision of Fire Truck and Auto Resulted in $5,000 Damage Suit

Judge Joseph D. Miah, of the Washington County Circuit Court, last night discharged a jury which announced it had "disagreed" over the $5,000 damage suit brought by Mrs. Lena Hershberger, of Cresaptown, against the Mayor and Council of Cumberland and Harry Spies, driver of the West Side fire truck.

The jury deliberated from noon until 9:30 o'clock last night before it reported the jurors were unable to agree on a verdict. The damage suit was the outgrowth of a collision between the fire truck and a car driven by Carlton R. Hershberger, of Cresaptown, last year in front of the fire station on Greene street.

The city contended that a fire truck has the right-of-way at all times and all cars must pull to the right of the road and stop when a fire truck approaches. The plaintiff's counsel countered with the statement that even though the law in that regard is evident all fire truck drivers must exercise due care. The plaintiff charged that the driver did not exercise due care in operation of the fire truck.

Five other suits by Mrs. Hershberger's husband and several others involved in the crash are pending. Edward J. Ryan, this city, and Charles Wagoner, of Hagerstown, represented the plaintiff while the city was represented by William C. Walsh, and W. Earle Cobey of this city and Stuart Bushong, of Hagerstown. The suit had been removed to Washington county for trial.

Associated Charities Will Leave City Hall; Other Changes Planned

The mayor's office will remain on the first floor of the city hall but will be moved from its present location to the northeast corner of the building within the next week or ten days, it was announced yesterday.

Under the new arrangement Mayor Conlon and Miss Mary Clay, secretary, will take over the two offices now occupied on the first floor by the health department.

The health offices will be moved upstairs to the rooms now occupied by the Associated Charities and the latter agency will be transferred to Room 8, second floor, of the Public Safety building.

Headquarters of the Western Maryland Amateur Radio Club must be moved from Room 8 to make room for the incoming tenants.

Officials of the radio club said that it may be necessary to curtail classes in view of the change. There are forty now enrolled in the code classes and the present course will be completed in the state armory after the code table is moved there.

The water department will be expanded to include the mayor's present office under the new set-up.

Women's Club Arranges Campaign for Pledges To Buy Defense Bonds

Plans for the inauguration of the pledge campaign of bonds, to be conducted in connection with the sugar rationing registration here May 4, 5, 6, and 7 were discussed by members of the Women's Organization of the Allegany County War Bond committee at a meeting Thursday evening in city hall.

Full details for the program will be announced in a few days, members stated following the meeting. Forrest Brown, chairman, outlined plans and conducted a discussion on the details of the campaign.

The pledge campaign was initiated by the Treasury department to materially increase the sale of bonds on the voluntary plan and thus avoid compulsory savings as suggested by some Washington officials.

During the coming week a number of talks will be made over the radio concerning the pledge campaign.

Draftees Will Be Allowed Furloughs In Certain Cases

Local Board To Send Request to Induction Station in All Cases

The War department has liberalized its furlough policy for newly-inducted draftees, P. Emmett Fahey, chief clerk of Local Board No. 2, was advised yesterday by state Selective Service headquarters.

The War department stated that the immediate induction of draftees would cause hardships in some cases and for that reason will allow men furloughs if they have sufficient reasons for making the request.

Local board officials will forward to the induction station the names of men for whom furloughs are requested. The number of days needed will also be sent along with the names but not more than ten days will ordinarily be granted.

The following rules govern the granting of furloughs:

City Will Not Pass Ordinance To Close Gas Stations Sundays

Under provisions of the proposed ordinance a fine of from $25 to $100 could be assessed for violators and the ordinance was to be effective for the duration of the war.

Laffey also accounted for final LaSalle run when he hit in the sixth after Schmutz was hit by a pitched ball.

Paw Paw gathered nine runs, McGann and Johnny Small entered the game in the first. The locals' fourth-inning out was marked by only three hits and the entire LaSalle infield fell apart. Four of the visitors' six errors came in that frame.

Funkhouser went the rounds Paw Paw, scattering eight and sending the third strike to the plate nine times. Schmutz

Sixteen Horses Entered in Wood Memorial

Derby Eligibles Related To Run Against Colchis

Apache and Requested Race Threat in R. Sterling Clark's Ace

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—Sixteen horses were entered today to race a crack at the $23,000 top prize in tomorrow's Wood Memorial at Jamaica, but eleven of them were more interested in a ride to Kentucky than in picking up the prize check.

Eleven were the Kentucky eligibles in the traditional and sixteenth derby prep, and now they do in this fixture their chances of enjoying blue grass a week from tomorrow.

William Woodward's Apache, untried in two easy outings as a year-old, tops the pack. In the past, he and Texas Ben Whitaker's, the little colt who won the Flamingo last winter but failed to make the Chesapeake at Havre de Grace last Saturday, are the only ones in the field rated almost good to top a train Sunday for Churchill Downs.

Colchis in Preackness

But in a non-derby eligible, the crack-running Colchis from the farm of R. Sterling Clark, comes the best chance for the derby hopes. Colchis, this husky son of a yearling, was whipped Alasb twice a week. The last time was at Chesapeake, when he ran right and Al Sabath's 1941 juvenile champ.

After making his standard-bearer for the Preackness with a $100 supplementary nominating fee, Clark surprised the railbirds by shipping Colchis up to New York a week for a chance at the Wood. The surprise was Whitaker's decision to send Requested along, too, previously making arrangements for the little son of Questionnaire to share Alasb's railroad car from Maryland to Kentucky.

And still a third surprise turned today when the entry list revealed that Mrs. Payne Whitney, who today holds a powerful derby in the Devil Diver and the Blue stakes winner, Shut Out, had shipped her third derby nominee, Askin, up from Keeneland for Wood.

Ramillies Fails in Test

Except for Apache and Requested, however, the eligibles in the Wood probably won't get any closer to the derby than reading about it in their favorite newspapers. Until this week, Walter Chrysler's Ramillies was rated a pretty good thing but he failed miserably in his first distance test, and his Wood chances look hopeless.

Mrs. Alice Sherman's American, a pair of good Florida campaigners, haven't done much since coming North. Mrs. Barclay Douglas's Call doesn't appear to have improved in his winter vacation. The rest apparently are in the Wood for the outing. They are the reported pair from movie man Ray B. Mayer's barn, Domingo and the King's Abbey; Chrysler's Jet and Robert J. Kleberg Jr.'s Mo.

Colchis is the only non-derby horse given any kind of a chance. Coming, purchased recently by B. Miller, might surprise. W. Crenshaw's Opening Bid and Thomas Howell's Scotland Light may be out of their league.

Country Club Opens Golf Season Today

The 1942 golf season at the Cumberland country club will open this weekend with a two-day blind bogey tournament and the start of qualifying play for the annual spring handicap championship tournament.

Handicap play will prevail for the day and night today and tomorrow. Eighteen-hole qualifying rounds for spring title tourney can be played up to and including May 1 with match play starting Monday.

Challenged, Mioland

At Comeback Trail

Havre de Grace, Md., April 24 (AP)—Challenged and Mioland, former rulers of the handicap ranks, hit the comeback trail again tomorrow, with the $10,000 Philadelphia handicap providing them an opportunity to regain some of their lost prestige.

The one-time stars, great runners in their peak but no balls of fire this year, will go against younger, and dangerous opponents in the mile and one-sixteenth race.

Marking the end of Havre de Grace's spring meeting.

Others named overnight were John Pictor, G. C. Greer, Jr.'s, E. G. Hackney's Sir Al, John L. Sullivan's Air Master, Hay Whitney's Gramps, Cedar, Warlock, Ella K. Bryson's Pistoles and Hugh Nesbitt's, Jr.

Many Unheralded Recruits Making Good in Majors

Rangy Willard Marshall of Giants Proves Surprise Package

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—Rookies good enough to break into the major league lineups at the start of the season usually get such a buildup during the winter and spring that the fans know them like so many relatives. But this year the house is creeping with strangers.

Approximately a dozen youngsters who were picked up by the big league clubs after their rosters had been printed this spring have managed to get introduced to society in the National and American Leagues.

The grand prize among these surprise packages, of course, turned out to be rangy Willard Marshall, the outfielder whom the New York Giants bought from Atlanta in February on a conditional basis. Almost Denied Chance

He created quite a stir in the two seasons with the Crackers after leaving Wake Forest college, but was almost denied a chance in the big leagues because he became 21 years old a couple of months ago and is expected to be gobbled up by the army some time this season.

The Giants also came home with another unheralded steed, Howard Moss, who was being steered upward through the Giants' farm system and had a ticket for Jersey City. Instead Manager Mel Ott of the Giants shocked everybody by deporting Johnny Rucker to Jersey City and keeping Moss.

The Chicago White Sox brought a fine looking prospect back from California in the person of Ray Schickley, fresh out of the University of California at Los Angeles. The tiny-mite currently holding down second base for the Washington Senators is Jose Luis Gomez, part time resident of Mexico City. He is 29 years old and has been moving mysteriously in the major league background for years.

A's Have Richardson

Alex Kvasnak, an 18-year-old Czechoslovakian outfielder who wears spectacles and hit 340 at Newport, Tenn., also is an added starter on the Senators' squad.

Cincinnati has a couple of unknowns in Pitcher Ewell Blackwell and infielder Joe Abreu. The Philadelphia Athletics have Ken Richardson, a young outfielder who played at Williamsport last year.

The A's also have Jim Castiglia, who learned his A. B. C's and T. formation as a football player at Georgetown university.

Doubtless there are other rookies sitting on benches in big league parks who will be heard from later. Just keep an eye on the strangers.

"Chappie" Blackburn, Louis's Trainer, Dies

CHICAGO, April 24 (AP)—Jack "Chappie" Blackburn, the guiding genius behind Champion Joe Louis's sensational ring career, died today.

One of the outstanding negro trainers of the prize ring and himself one of the greatest defensive fighters who ever lived, Blackburn was regarded on the road to recovery after a siege of pneumonia.

Convinced at home the last three weeks, he had gone for an automobile ride Wednesday and had planned another Sunday. A few minutes before noon today, however, he was stricken and died, apparently from a heart ailment. He was 58 years old.

Blackburn became Louis's trainer soon after the Brown Bomber turned professional, guided him to an eight-round knockout and championship over Jim Braddock in 1937 and had been in Joe's corner in every fight since until he became ill with pneumonia shortly before the Abe Simon bout, March 17.

BOY ON MAN'S ERRAND
WHY IS IT that some ordinarily strong players hate to use a high trump for ruffing purposes, when they can spare it just as well as a little one? You see that happen every week among pretty fair players, usually because they cannot realize that one defender might hold a very long suit, and therefore the other defender might be very short in it.

Approximately that bidding brought heart game contracts to West at several duplicate tables. It was sad to see one of them kicking the contract away, whereas the other declarer took the club K with the A, ruffed the 6 with the heart 2, discarded the spade 4 with the heart 5 and led the club 10, ruffing it with the heart 8. South promptly over-ruffed with the 9 and the contract could no longer be made, as three diamonds had to be lost by West.

One of the Wests who made the contract took the club K with the A and then ruffed the 6 with the heart 8. He led back the heart 2 to the A and then ruffed the club 10 with the heart Q. South could not over-ruff, so the contract was safe. A diamond was thrown on the spade A, the spade 4 ruffed by the heart 5 and the top hearts scored, three diamonds being left at the end and North taking two of them plus a club.

Injuries Prove Fatal to Aged Local Citizen

Robert I. Clark Dies as Result of Being Struck by Bicycle

Injuries suffered when he was struck by a bicycle on April 14 proved fatal to Robert Isaac Clark, 17 Browning street, yesterday on his eighty-second birthday. He died at 10:30 o'clock in Allegheny hospital where little hope was held for his recovery after he was admitted.

Clark was struck by a bicycle ridden by Arthur McKee, 18 1015 Gay street, at the intersection of Oldtown road and Maryland avenue. Sgt. Raymond R. Johnston, who investigated, said, Clark stepped from the curb in front of the bicycle, according to the officer.

He suffered from lacerations of the head, possible fracture of the left collarbone and bruises of his arms and legs.

Until he was retired fifteen years ago, he had been employed by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad as a pumper. He was a member of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans.

A son of the late Ambrose and Rebecca Clark, he was born at Sir John's Run, W. Va.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Sally A. Clark, two sons, Jesse E. and Ernest R. Clark, both of Cumberland; three brothers, James Clark, Magnolia, W. Va.; and one sister, Mrs. Ida Compton, Sir John's Run.

Funeral services will be held Monday at Bethany United Brethren church with the Rev. C. K. Welch officiating. Interment will be in Berkeley, Springs, W. Va.

WOMAN CHARGES HER EX-HUSBAND BEAT AND ASSAULTED HER

William J. Kammauf, of the Winchester road section, will be given a hearing Monday in trial magistrates' court on charges of assault and battery which were preferred by his former wife, Edna Pitts. Kammauf was released yesterday on $200 bond pending the trial.

According to Mrs. Pitts, Kammauf lived at her home in Michigan to the effect that her daughter was ill and asked her to come here. Mrs. Pitts and her husband did so only to discover her daughter was not ill, she said.

One evening she took the daughter out for a while with the understanding she and the daughter would return by 11 p. m. When Mrs. Pitts and her husband and the daughter arrived back at Kammauf's residence an argument ensued, she charged. It was at this time the alleged assault took place, Mrs. Pitts said.

William Garlick Dies after Being Struck by Truck

Succumbs in Miner's Hospital Four Hours after Accident Occurs

Walking into the path of a truck as he was crossing the highway at Cessna curve, two miles from Mt. Savage, yesterday morning at 7:15 o'clock, William Garlick, 66 a coal miner of Homewood addition, on Mt. Savage road suffered injuries that caused his death four hours later in Miner's hospital, in Frostburg.

The truck was driven by James Welsh, Mt. Savage, but no charges have been placed against him, officers said. He was questioned yesterday afternoon at the office of the state's attorney and then released until 10:30 o'clock this morning.

State Trooper Charles D. McLane, who made the investigation, said Garlick had alighted from a Mt. Savage bus, operated by George A. Markwood, Mt. Savage, on the way to Little Ben mine where he is employed.

As the bus moved off after the stop, Garlick started to cross the highway from in back of the vehicle. Welsh, the trooper said, drove to the left side of the highway to avoid striking the man but Garlick, who had almost crossed the road, saw the truck approaching, started to retrace his steps and walked squarely in front of the truck.

The truck driver and Ralph Robbette, a passenger on the bus, placed the injured man in the truck and took him to the hospital where he was treated for head and body injuries.

A son of the late Joseph and Eva Price Garlick, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jennie Long Garlick, one daughter, Mrs. John Morrissey, Cumberland; six brothers, Lewis and Christopher, both of Locust Grove; Michael, Barreille; Walter and Wilson, Six Mile Run, Pa.; Francis, Keyser, W. Va.; and two sisters, Mrs. John Roman, Homewood addition; and Mrs. Benjamin O'Neal, Mt. Savage.

The body is at Stein's chapel where funeral services will be held. Arrangements are not complete.

His wife and two children reside on Massachusetts avenue.

Catesby F. ApJones, 27, of Washington, D. C., yesterday was committed to the Allegheny county jail in default of $3,000 bond preparatory to being taken to Elkins, W. Va., to await federal grand jury action on a charge of impersonating a federal officer or employee.

ApJones, alias Wayne L. Robbins, was ordered held by United States Commissioner Wilbur V. Wilson after a preliminary hearing at which the defendant pleaded guilty and waived extradition to West Virginia. It was Wilson's first case after being appointed commissioner this week to succeed James Alfred Avirett.

The defendant is accused of representing himself to be an employee of the U. S. Engineers, War department, when he allegedly cashed several bad checks aggregating $25, last week in Parkersburg, W. Va. He admitted passing the checks and also said he was in no way connected with the federal government, according to government agents.

ApJones was arrested here earlier in the week at a downtown hotel by State Police Sgt. John H. Doud and City Police Lieut. James E. Van on a pick-up broadcast by the Parkersburg police. The federal charge was entered later by the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Huntington, W. Va.

The maximum penalty for the offense is a three-year prison term or a $1,000 fine, or both.

Registration of Men between Ages Of 45 and 64 Will Start Today

Draft Board Officials Estimate 9,000 to 10,000 Will Register in Allegheny County

Allegheny county's war-time registration machinery, will get its toughest workout in the next twelve days.

Starting today school teachers of the county will begin a three day registration of all men in Allegheny county between the ages of forty-five and sixty-four. These men will be subject to call for non-military duty but will not be subject to active combat service.

In Allegheny county men may register in all public schools with the exception of Rockville, Detmold, Beall high and Lincoln. LaSalle will be the only parochial school used in the registration.

The schools will be open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. today; Sunday from 1 to 5 p. m. and from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. Monday.

Draft board officials estimated yesterday that between 9,000 and 10,000 persons would register in Allegheny county. Volunteers will assist the school teachers. Those who register must have been born after April 28, 1877 and on or before February 16, 1897.

After a few days rest, the teachers will tackle the biggest assignment of all—consumer sugar registration. For this one, they'll get extra help.

Maryland's doctors, lawyers, merchants, chiefs—or at least a lot of them—will sign during the registration beginning today.

The class will include the governor, most state executives, many mayors and thousands of other prominent Marylanders. Governor O'Connor himself will start the registration officially—putting his name on the dotted line at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning at Local Board No. 1 in Annapolis.

Some of the draft board members have already registered for the draft but most will enroll with the new age group.

The council immediately authorized McDonald and Rizer to visit the quarry today and arrange for

U. S. COMMISSIONER—Wilbur V. Wilson, Cumberland attorney has been appointed United States Commissioner to succeed James Alfred Avirett, who enlisted in the United States Army yesterday. (See story this page.)

Wilbur V. Wilson Is Appointed U. S. Commissioner Here

Succeeds James Alfred Avirett Who Enlists in the Army

Wilbur V. Wilson, of 320 Schley street, has been appointed United States commissioner here to succeed James Alfred Avirett, of Rose Hill, who has enlisted in the United States army at Baltimore. It was learned yesterday.

The appointment was made this week by William C. Coleman and W. Calvin Chesnut, judges of the United States district court for Maryland, and Wilson was sworn in by Miss Sarah S. Sharp, notary public in Avirett's office.

Wilson, 38, has been a member of the bar here for thirty-five years, beginning the practice of law in 1907 after graduating from Dickinson college and the University of Maryland Law school.

He is a member of the board of education, appeal agent for Local Draft Board No. 1, president of the Commercial Savings Bank, treasurer of Memorial hospital and a member of the board of directors of the Cumberland Free Public Library and of the Port Cumberland Hotel Company. He is a Democrat.

In accepting Avirett's resignation, Judges Coleman and Chesnut said that they both regretted very much to lose his "valuable services" and added that the manner in which he had conducted his duties had been "most satisfactory." Extending best wishes to him for success in his new duties, the jurists expressed the hope that at some future date he may again be available for re-appointment to the post of United States commissioner.

It was understood that Wilson did not seek the appointment to fill the vacancy but was strongly recommended by Avirett and other Cumberland citizens. The jurists described him as "well qualified" to assume the post.

Several other attorneys were applicants for the job, according to informed sources.

Avirett, who has been commissioner here since December, 1938, was accepted for enlistment in the army yesterday in Baltimore and is scheduled to report for duty May 1.

Extinguished Street Lights Will Guide Those Who Can't Hear Sirens

That's Best Bet for Black-out Monday Night, Hoenicka Advises

Those who are unable to hear the wailing of air raid warning sirens in the blackout test scheduled here Monday, April 27, are advised by Reid C. Hoenicka, chief of the Cumberland Fire Department, to use street lights as their guide.

"Residents have no excuse if they do not hear the sirens as all street lights will be extinguished at the same time and this will be ample warning that the blackout is in force," Hoenicka declared.

The lights are controlled by approximately ten switches and they will be extinguished by members of the police department.

Five Warning Devices
Hoenicka said that if the new siren in the rear of the South End fire station is in operation by Monday, five warning devices will be in use for the blackout that evening.

The B. and O. shops whistle, the Ridgeley, W. Va., whistle, the fire siren at the corner of Liberty and Baltimore street and the two new

Warrior Mountain Forest Fire Is Raging Unchecked

Warden Reports Blaze Has Destroyed 300 Acres So Far

Forest fires continue to plague wardens in Allegheny county and yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the largest fire reported this year broke out on the west side of Warrior Mountain, near Route 51 on the Oldtown road, just beyond the New Mile House.

Umer H. Wigfield, district fire warden, said the blaze had burned over 300 acres by 6 p. m. and was "still raging." Wigfield sent four crews of fire-fighters to the scene and later joined them for an inspection of the fire and its cause.

He said a lumber mill is being operated in that section but did not know if it was endangered by the fire. Very few homes are in the region, he added. Some of the timber is valuable while the rest is of the scrub variety. Wigfield said.

Other fires reported by Wigfield were a blaze of 100 acres on Dark mountain near Cresapton; a five-acre fire along Haystack mountain near the Winchester road; and a blaze on the west side of Dark mountain near Loneconing.

Wigfield issued another plea for persons burning rubbish and brush to exercise extreme care as the woods are "like tinder" at this time of the year.
